Throughout the season, players would end up with a master resource. The season would end with the judge awarding top point to player whose master resource stands highest. So even though it seems that a player has collected more resources, they would not qualify for the top-10 since they did not have the highest overall collected resources. It would be a single elimination tournament with a cutthroat mentality.

The winner would be the one to survive the cut. The winner would receive the highest-ranked resources. So for example, if a player had 2200 resources, they will have a target number of 3000 in order to make the cut. The person who obtained this was the winner of the game. After a player has survived the cut, they would compete again with other survivors, getting the remaining resources and allowing them to complete their second target in order to be among the final 5. The survivor with the highest total collected resources would win the championship of the season. We're currently looking at SQL Server as a database for this application. My question is this: What would be the best way to structure the database. I have an idea of having 2 tables: Business Data Business would contain the ID
